Governor Bill Ritter appoints SERTC's General Manager to the Hazardous Materials Responder Voluntary Certification Advisory Board

Mike Cook, General Manager of the Security and Emergency Response Training Center (SERTC), has been appointed by Colorado Governor Ritter to serve on the Advisory Board to the Director of the Division of Fire Safety. The seven-member board establishes a hazardous materials responder voluntary certification program and sets minimum standards for the training of responders.

"We are very proud that our governor has chosen Mike for this board," said Lisa Stabler, Vice President Operations and Training. "Mike brings a great deal of experience to the table. His previous leadership roles in law enforcement and hazardous materials response during 9/11 and Hurricane Katrina, as well as his current assignment leading SERTC will add value to the certification process."
